Profile of the study programme

In contrast to other university fields of study, theology has a guiding perspective of its own: it is fundamentally concerned with God and doctrine and thereby reflects its own position and that of the church in society. The critical work of theology is aimed at contributing to keeping the issues of value and truth alive in public discourse.

A many-faceted discipline, Theology is taught across five departments. The objective of the first three years is to gain the Bachelor (180 ECTS credits) degree and to familiarise the students with theology by introducing them to its different fields
