This Bachelor’s programme covers both the ancient Greek and Roman world. Its main focus is the acquisition and consolidation of Greek and Latin language skills, as well as the interpretation of literary documents in the broader context of Greek and Roman culture.

At the University of Fribourg, we place special emphasis on the reception of Greek classical antiquity during the imperial period, and the culture and literature of Late Antiquity, the Latin Middle Ages and the Latin literature of the Renaissance. In partnership with the Institute of General and Comparative Literature (Institut de littérature générale et comparée/Institut für Allgemeine und Vergleichende Literaturwissenschaft), students also study the influence of literary forms and classical mythology on modern literature.

The Classics programme concentrates essentially on the teaching of Greek and Latin languages and literature, reading texts in the original language, and exercises and proseminars aimed at deepening students’ knowledge of the language and of philological techniques.

Fribourg profile

The University of Fribourg specialises in classical studies and special attention is paid to the reception of Greek classical antiquity during the imperial period, the culture and literature of Late Antiquity and, through close collaboration with the Institute of Mediaeval Studies (Institut d'études médiévales/Mediävistisches Institut), the Latin Middle Ages and the Byzantine Renaissance. In partnership with the Institute of General and Comparative Literature (Institut de littérature générale et comparée/Institut für Allgemeine und Vergleichende Literaturwissenschaft), students also study the influence of literary forms and classical mythology on modern literature. For a given problem, they will have the requisite methodological skills to draw up a pertinent bibliography, search for sources, analyse them critically and in detail, present a summary of the issue and provide an oral or written presentation of the results of their research.
