Fribourg profile
The doctorate involves the formulation and public defence of thorough and in-depth research work, conducted in close collaboration between the doctoral student and the thesis supervisor (or co-supervisor).

Theses conducted within the Department might address themes concerning the following:
– Discourses on music (historiography, press, composers' writings)
– Cultural history of music
– History of music in France (19th-20th centuries)
– History and dramaturgy of musical theatre (17th-21st century)
– Vocal music and literature (17th-21st century)
– Baroque music and emotions
– Musical patronage in Italy (17th century)
– Swiss French music
– Film music
– Opera staging
– Relationship between music and visuals (opera and concert relays)

Joint doctoral seminars are organised with the Musicology chairs of the Swiss universities. Various other opportunities may arise during the writing of the thesis: attendance and/or organisation of conferences, study days.
