Bachelor of Science

Profile of the study programme
This bachelor programme has the special feature that half of it consists of the study of education sciences and half of the study of psychology. It is thus primarily aimed at those students who would like to use this as a basis for obtaining the «Diplôme d’Enseignement pour les Écoles de Maturité (DEEM, French-speaking section)/Lehrdiplom für Maturitätsschulen (LDM, German-speaking section)» in the teaching subject «Pedagogy/Psychology». In psychology, students deal with the cognitive and affective areas of human experience and behaviour, with diagnostic and clinical treatment procedures as well as research methods and tools. In the pedagogical parts of the programme, the focus is on social, economic and ecological conditions of children growing up, as well as on the theories, history and empiricism of learning, education and socialisation processes, both with regard to individual ages and to institutions and their political contexts. Thus, the focus of this study programme is on both theoretical and empirical perspectives of both disciplines.

Learning outcomes and career openings
The primary goal of graduates of this study programme is to obtain a teaching diploma and subsequently teach at baccalaureate schools («Écoles de maturité/Maturitätsschulen») or upper secondary specialised schools («Écoles de culture générale/Fachmittelschulen»). However, since only a few hours are allocated to these subjects in schools, students are advised to choose an additional teaching subject with many more hours allocated to it if a full-time position is desired.

After obtaining the bachelor degree, it is possible to take up the master programme «Pedagogy/Psychology».

Although this bachelor programme allows access to the master degree in Education Sciences, direct entry into the master degree in Psychology is not possible because the transitional requirements to be completed in this discipline are too numerous.
